Albert meets America : how journalists treated genius during Einstein's 1921 travel

Edited by Jozsef Illy

Baltimore, MD : Johns Hopkins University Press, 2006.

530.092 ALB

Author presents a fascinating compilation of media stories of Einstein's tour, which cover his science, his Zionism, and the anti-Semitism he encountered. As we travel with Einstein, from headline to headline, we experience his emotional connection with American Jews and his frustration at becoming world famous even though his theories were not truly understood.

Communications: an international history of the formative years

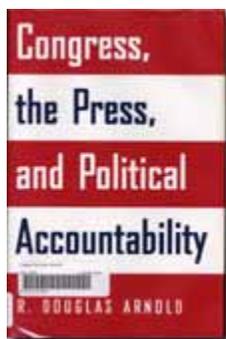

Russell Burns

London : Institution of Electrical Engineers, 2004.

384 BUR

This book traces the evolution of communications from 500 BC, when fire beacons were used for signaling, to the 1940s, when high definition television systems were developed for the entertainment, education and enlightenment of society. It does not simply provide a chronicle of dates and events, nor is it a descriptive catalogue of devices and systems, rather, it discusses the essential factors-technical, political, social, economic and general-that enabled the evolution of modern communications.

Congress, the press, and political accountability

R. Douglas Arnold
New York, NY ;
Princeton, N.J :
Russell Sage Foundation :
Princeton University

Press, 2004.

070.4 ARN

This is an examination of how local media outlets cover members of the United States Congress. Douglas Arnold analyzes all coverage over a two-year period-every news story, editorial, opinion column, letter, and list. He investigates how twenty-five newspapers covered twenty-five local representatives; and next, how competing newspapers in six cities covered their corresponding legislators.

Contribución al desarrollo de la sociedad del conocimiento

Editores, Margarita Almada de Ascencio ... [et al.]

México : Universidad Nacional Autónoma de México, 2003.

Convergence culture : where old and new media collide

Henry Jenkins
New York, NY : New York University Press, 2006.

302.23 JEN

Media analyst Jenkins delves beneath the new media hype to uncover the important cultural transformations that are taking place as media converge. He takes us into the secret world of Survivor Spoilers, where avid internet users pool their knowledge to unearth the show's secrets before they are revealed on the air. He shows us how The Matrix has pushed transmedia storytelling to new levels, creating a fictional world where consumers track down bits of the story across multiple media channels.

The Creation of the Media

Paul Starr
New York, NY:
Basic Books, 2004

302.23 STA

This book reveals how politics created our media world, from the emergence of the first newspapers and postal systems in early modern Europe and colonial America to the rise of the mass press, telecommunications, motion pictures, and broadcasting in the twentieth century. It shows how critical choices about freedom of expression, ownership of media, the architecture of networks, secrecy, privacy, and intellectual property have made the modern media such as much a political as a technological invention.

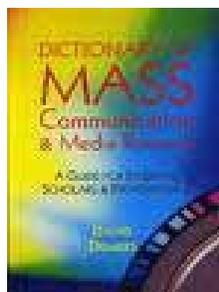

The Digital city : the American metropolis and information technology

Michel S. Laguerre
New York, NY :
Palgrave Macmillan,
2005.

303.48 LAG

Shows that digital communication has contributed to the social transformation of the city because of the virtual practices it engenders, and argues that the virtual has transformed the modern American city profoundly by turning it into a digital city, thus enabling it to engage in new processes of globalization.

Everyman news : the changing American front page

Michele Weldon
Columbia MO :
University of Missouri
Press, 2008.

070.4 WEL

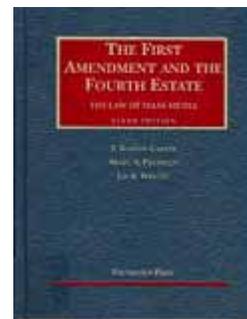

Examines how newspapers have changed over the past few years, becoming story papers. Comparing 850 stories, story approaches, and unofficial sourcing in twenty American newspapers from 2001 and 2004, Weldon reveals a shift toward features over hard news, along with an increase in anecdotal or humanistic approaches to all stories.

The First Amendment and the fourth estate: the law of mass media

*T. Barton Carter,
Marc A. Franklin, Jay
B. Wright*
New York, NY :
Foundation Press :
Thomson/West, 2005.

REF 343.099 CAR

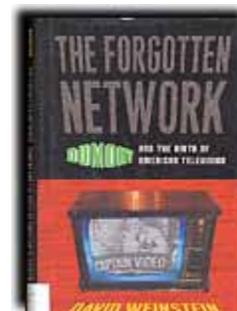

This edition reflects the author's belief that communications students are quite capable of reading Supreme Court opinions and that doing so is essential to understanding the thought processes of the justices who are making First Amendment Law. The reader will find more than 30 principal cases, the decisions which help define communications law as it is known today. In between there are references to hundreds more cases and statutes about which any professional should be informed.

The forgotten network: DuMont and the birth of American television

By David Weinstein
Philadelphia, PA :
Temple University
Press, 2004.

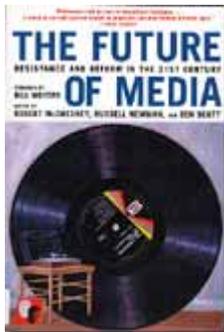

384.55 WEI

During the late 1940s and early 1950s, the name DuMont was synonymous with the new medium of television. Many people first watched TV on DuMont-brand sets, the best receivers money could buy. More viewers enjoyed their first programs on the DuMont network, which was established in 1946. Network founder Allen B. DuMont became a folk hero for his entrepreneurial spirit in bringing television to the American people. Yet, by 1955, the DuMont network was out of business and its founder and namesake was forced to relinquish control of the company he had spent a quarter century building. An original and important contribution to the history of television.

It's not just PR : public relations
in society

*W. Timothy Coombs and Sherry J.
Holladay*
Malden, MA :
Blackwell Pub, 2007.

659.2 COO

Provides a balanced view of public relations as neither flawless nor sinister and further examines public relations as a tool for marginalized groups, focusing on its use in the non profit sector, and citing relevant examples like the use of PR to pressure Coca Cola to reform labor practices in Latin America.

Killing the messenger :
Journalists at Risk in Modern Warfare

Herbert N. Foerstel
Westport, CT :
Praeger, 2006.

070.433 FOE

Reveals the new face of war and journalism, and correspondents describe the dangers they face, and attempt to explain why are they targeted. Extended interviews with correspondents who have been abducted and tortured during Middle East conflicts shed chilling light on this new face of war.

Jefferson and the press : crucible of liberty

Jerry W. Knudson
Columbia, SC :
University of South
Carolina Press, 2006.

973.460 KNU

Knudson details the coverage of four Federalist and four Republican newspapers in wide circulation of six major episodes of the Jeffersonian era and profiles the men projecting these radically different views showing these editors to have been sophisticated, and at times unscrupulous, political "scribblers" who fearlessly printed what they thought with bluntness and ferocity that might shock even twenty-first-century readers.

Listener supported : the culture and history of public radio

Jack W. Mitchell
Westport, CT :
Praeger, 2005.

384.54 MIT

The author tells the story of public radio from the point of view of an insider, a participant, and a thoughtful observer that traces its origins in the progressive movement of the 20th century, and analyzes the people, institutions, ideas, political forces, and economic realities that helped it evolve into what we know as public radio today.

Brad Fitch
Alexandria, VA :

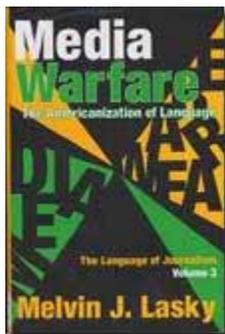

TheCapitol.Net, 2004.

659.2 FIT

This book is for those who are seeking the most effective means to communicate on behalf of a government agency, a national association or nonprofit, or an elected official. This work is an amalgamation of the collective wisdom of hundreds of public relations professionals in the worlds of government and politics.

Media warfare, the Americanization of language (The language of journalism. Vol. 3)

Melvin J. Lasky
New Brunswick, N.J.;
London : Transaction:
Eurospan, 2005.

070.401 LAS

This volume pays particular attention to the gradual easing and near disappearance of censorship rules in 1960s and after, and the attendant effects on electronic and print media. The author details the pervasive and often indirect influence of the worlds of fashion and advertising on journalism with their imperatives of sensationalism and novelty.

Media in the digital age

John V. Pavlik
New York, NY :
Columbia University
Press, 2008.

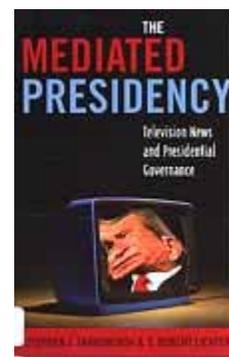

302.231 PAV

Examines our current digital innovations - blogs, podcasting, peer-to-peer file sharing, etc.- and their positive and negative implications. Focuses on present developments, but also peers into the future, foreseeing a media landscape dominated by a highly fragmented, though active, audience; intense media competition; and scarce advertising dollars. Shows how professional journalism and media can hold on to their role as a vital information lifeline and continue to operate as the tool of a successful democracy.

The Mediated Presidency : Television News and Presidential Governance

Stephen J. Farnsworth ; S. Robert Lichter
Lanham, MD : Rowman
& Littlefield, 2006.

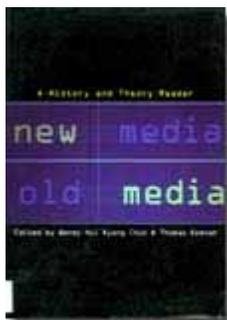

070.4 FAR

The centerpiece of this book is a content analysis that compares news coverage of the first year of the Reagan, Clinton, and George W. Bush administrations. This analysis was developed from a study originally commissioned by the Council for Excellence in Government as part of its ongoing Government's place in the lives and esteem of American citizens.

Edited by Wendy Hui Kyong Chun & Thomas Keenan
 New York, NY :
 Routledge, 2006.

302.23 NEW

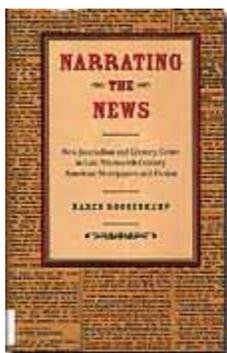

Is a comprehensive anthology of original and classic essays that explore the tensions of old and new in digital culture. The many topics explored in this provocative volume include websites, web-cams, the rise and follow of dot-com mania, Internet journalism, the open source movement, and computer viruses. It is essential reading for anyone interested in understanding the cultural impact of new media.

Narrating the News : New Journalism and Literary Genre in Late Nineteenth-Century American Newspapers and Fiction

Karen Roggenkamp
 Kent, OH : Kent State University Press, 2005.

071.309 ROG

This book examines five major stories featured in three respected New York newspapers during the 1890s to illustrate how new journalism manipulated specific segments of the literary marketplace. The author looks at part of the history of mass print communications more generally, exposing the competitive and reinforcing interplay between specific literary genres and their journalistic revisions.

News ombudsmen in North America : assessing an experiment in social responsibility

By Neil Nemeth

Westport, CT :
 Praeger, 2003.
 070.92 NEM

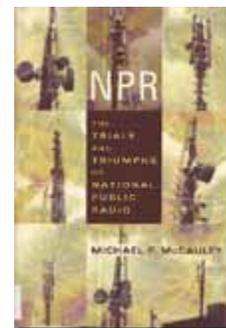

A former reporter, Nemeth covers a neglected topic with this timely book. He uses case studies, surveys, and interviews to explore how and why ombudsmen work to provide accountability in news organizations. Discussing specific incidents and how ombudsmen handled them, the book covers important concepts--including newspapers' historical resistance to hiring ombudsmen, a situation even more problematic in today's corporate environment. Virtually the only work of its type, this book should be in every academic library and required reading for editors and publishers.

NPR : the Trials and Triumphs of National Public Radio

Michael P. McCauley
 New York, NY : Columbia University Press, 2005.

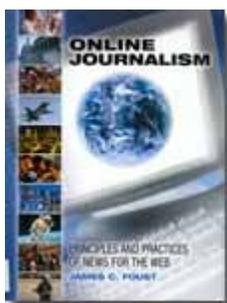

384.54 MCC

The people who shaped America's public broadcasting system thought it should be "a civilized voice in a civilized community"--a clear alternative to commercial broadcasting. This book tells the story of how NPR has tried to embody this idea. McCauley describes NPR's evolution from virtual obscurity in the early 1970s, when it was riddled with difficulties--political battles, unseasoned leadership, funding problems--to a first-rate broadcast organization. The book draws on a wealth of primary evidence, including 57 interviews with people who have been central to the NPR story, and places the network within the historical context of the wider U.S. radio industry. Since the late 1970s, NPR has worked hard to understand the characteristics of its audience. Because of this, its content is now targeted toward its most loyal listeners-- highly educated baby-boomers, for the most part--who help support their local stations through pledges and fund drives.

Online journalism : principles and practices of news for the Web

James C. Foust
Scottsdale, AZ :
Holcomb Hathaway,
2005.

070.4 FOU

It will show you how to apply your developing journalistic skills to the Internet. It reviews some of the basic principles of journalism while showing you how to put these principles into practice online. Presents a combination of broad conventions, basic technological information and practical applications.

Pages from the past: history and memory in American magazines

Carolyn Kitch
Chapel Hill, NC :
University of North Carolina Press, 2005.

051 KIT

Drawing on evidence from the pages of more than sixty magazines, the author examines the role of journalism in creating collective memory and identity for Americans and argues that editorial perspectives, visual and narrative content, and the tangibility and keepsake qualities of magazines makes them key repositories that reflect and inform who Americans are now.

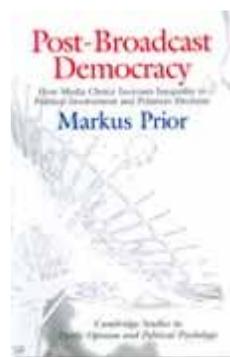

People's movements, people's press : the journalism of social justice movements

Bob Ostertag
Boston, MA : Beacon
Press, 2006.

071.309 OST

Movements for social justice have created a wide array of pamphlets, broadsides, newsletters, newspapers and even glossy magazines. The author brings this hidden history to light, examining the publications of the abolitionist, woman suffrage, gay and lesbian, and environmental movements, as well as the underground GI press during the Vietnam War.

Post-broadcast democracy : how media choice increases inequality in political involvement and polarizes elections

Markus Prior
Cambridge, MA :
Cambridge

University Press, 2007.

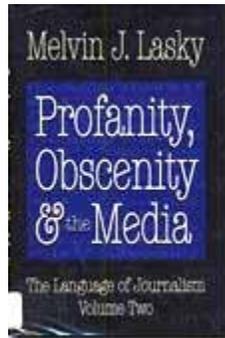

302.23 PRI

Shows the impact of a changing media environment on citizen knowledge, voter turnout, incumbency advantage, partisan polarization, and other vital features of American politics. It does so by clarifying not just how people choose whether or not to pay attention to politics, but also why these choices changes so dramatically from person to person and from decade to decade.

Profanity, obscenity and the media (The language of journalism. Vol. 2)

Melvin J. Lasky
New Brunswick, N.J ;
London : Transaction :
Eurospan, 2005.

070.401 LAS

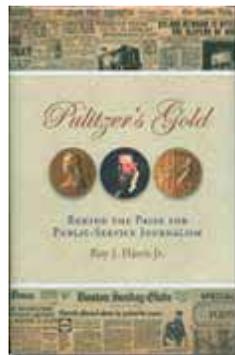

This text documents the possibly terminal crisis affecting honest, thoughtful and independent journalism in the Western world. It also adds the personal touch of both wit and anecdote expressed by an experienced international journalist and historian.

Pulitzer's gold : behind the prize for public service journalism

Roy J. Harris
Columbia, MO :
University of Missouri Press,
2007.

071.3079 HAR

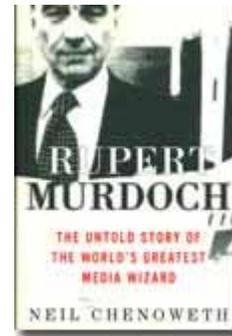

Examines the ninety-year history of the Pulitzer Prize for Public Service awarded to newspapers. Harris recalls many stories including the New York Time's Pentagon Papers exclusive, the Watergate scandal that was uncovered by the Washington Post and coverage of Hurricane Katrina by the Times-Picayune of New Orleans and the Sun Herald of Biloxi, Mississippi.

Rupert Murdoch : the untold story of the world's greatest media wizard

Neil Chenoweth
New York, NY : Crown
Business, 2001.

070.092 CHE

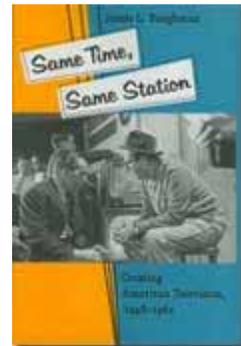

This is both, the biography of Murdoch the man (including the divorce from his wife, Anna; his remarriage to a woman young enough to be his granddaughter; and the struggle between his two sons for eventual control of the family holdings) and a "follow the money" investigation that reveals how he has managed to have such a huge impact on the communications revolution that promises to utterly transform life in the twenty-first century.

Same time, same station : creating American television, 1948-1961

James L. Baugham
Baltimore, MD : Johns
Hopkins University Press,
2007.

384.55 BAU

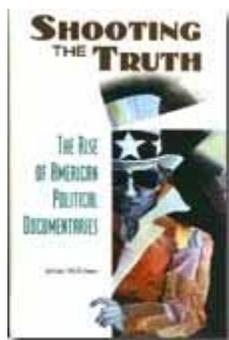

Takes readers behind the scenes of early broadcasting, examining corporate machinations that determined the future of television. The tale of television's founding years reveals a series of decisions that favored commercial success over cultural aspiration.

Shooting the truth : the rise of American political documentaries

James McEnteer
Westport, CT :
Praeger, 2006.

070.18 MCE

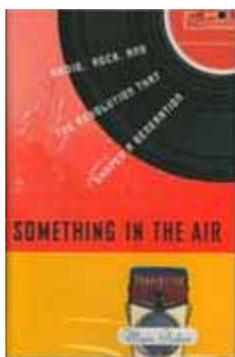

The author parses the politics of non fiction films of recent decades, which together constitute an alternative history to many official stories offered by the government and his media minions. Tracing the origins of an oppositional documentary movement to the Vietnam Era, McEnteer shows how a strong independent documentary tradition grew from television's failure to sustain a commitment to the public interest.

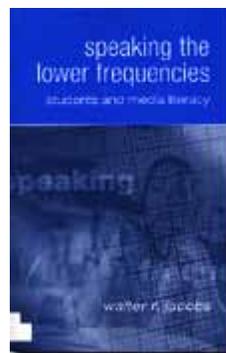

Something in the air : radio, rock, and the revolution that shaped a generation

Marc Fisher
New York, NY :
Random House, 2007.

384.54 FIS

Chronicles the extraordinary evolution of the unique and timeless medium that captured our hearts and minds, shook up our souls, tuned in - and turned on - our consciousness, and went from being written off to rewriting the rules of pop culture. Disproving the notion that a new technology would wipe out old media, radio survived, changing itself and the nation.

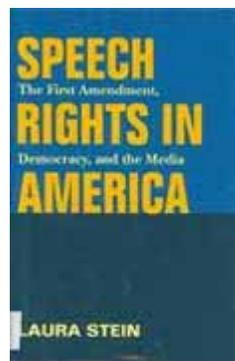

Speaking the lower frequencies : students and media literacy

Walter R. Jacobs
Albany, NY : State
University of New York
Press, 2005.

302.23 JAC

Demonstrates how students can be critical consumers on media while retaining the pleasure they derive from it. He shows that when students are encouraged to be more than just passive receptors of the media they learn to develop active, critical voices that they use both inside and outside the classroom.

Speech rights in America : the First Amendment, democracy, and the media

Laura Lynn Stein
Urbana, IL : University of Illinois Press, 2006.

302.23 STE

Author argues that the ways in which the courts interpret the First Amendment unduly constrict the speech rights of citizens. Legal interpretations of the First Amendment, the principal guarantor of speech rights in the United States, often privilege the interests of media owners over those of the broader citizenry.

Stylebook and briefing on media law

Edited by Norm Goldstein
